Høst 2023

Description

This examination assesses competency in Old Irish at the introductory level after one semester of study. The course met for two hours per week over fourteen weeks.

The examination consists of three sections, two of which are compulsory and one of which is optional. The first section involves translation into English or Norwegian of Old Irish sentences. The second section involves grammatical analysis of Old Irish sentences. The third section consists of short answers to questions about Old Irish grammar. Use of textbooks, grammars, vocabulary, and notes during the exam was permitted.

Assessment

Partial credit is given for answers with some errors. Points are given for correct answers but not deducted for incorrect answers. In other words, it is not possible to earn an overall negative grade on the exam.

90 points or above, "A"

An 'A' exam will demonstrate an excellent knowledge of the language at the introductory level. The translations and the grammatical analysis will contain few or no errors, indicating that the student has become familiar with the relevant set of main grammatical features of Old Irish.

80-89 points, "B"

A 'B' exam will demonstrate a very good knowledge of the language at the introductory level but will have a higher number of minor errors in translation and grammatical analysis than an 'A' exam.

70-79 points, "C"

A 'C' exam will demonstrate a good knowledge of the language at the introductory level. The answers may contain numerous minor errors in translation and grammatical analysis but will demonstrate a good general understanding of Old Irish grammar.

60-69 points, “D”

A ‘D’ exam will demonstrate some knowledge of the language at the introductory level. There may be significant errors in translation and grammatical analysis, which nevertheless are indicative of some understanding of Old Irish grammar.

50-59 points, “E”

An ‘E’ exam will demonstrate uneven or limited knowledge of the language at the introductory level, being indicative of a weak understanding of Old Irish grammar.

0-49 points, “F”

An ‘F’ exam will demonstrate insufficient knowledge of the language at the introductory level. Some sections may be left incomplete or unattempted, being indicative of a poor understanding of Old Irish Grammar.
